ARCATA – Arcata Police have identified an individual who may be associated with the antisemitic flyers tossed in Arcata driveways Sept. 17-18. The flyers were identical in content and delivery method to the ones distributed in Arcata and other areas of Humboldt on July 4.

A Sunny Brae resident’s yard cam caught a video clip, widely shared on social media, of a person in a hoodie carrying a bag and tossing something in a residential driveway there. APD Det. Sgt. Todd Dokweiler said the incident is under active investigation, and that while the department believes it knows who is responsible for the flyer distribution, the act wasn’t a crime. “Due to the way the flyers are constructed, they fall under First Amendment protections,” Dokweiler said.

The flyers were discovered mostly in Sunny Brae, along Buttermilk Lane, Margaret Lane, Chester

H Street brawl brings peaceable blowback

MAD RIVER UNION

ARCATA – A violent melee on H Street early in the morning of Sunday, Sept. 17 left one person hospitalized and several with minor injuries.

The near-Plaza brawl, initially reported at 1:11 a.m., was instigated by a handful of aggressive males, and APD has identified four possible suspects, according to APD Det. Sgt. Todd Dokweiler. He said the department was obtaining statements from witnesses and seeking additional witnesses.

The violent incident brought a wholesome reaction in the form of a “Picnic for Peace on the Plaza” Monday morning as part of national Community and Family Day. Stated a flyer, “Help stop the VIOLENCE in Humboldt by showing up to show your support.”

Board censures Planco chair for ‘reprehensible’ comments

Alan Bongio

MAD RIVER UNION

HUMBOLDT – Alan Bongio will step down as the chair of the Humboldt County Planning Commission and is censured by the Board of Supervisors for making comments widely described as racist and offensive.

The offensive comments were made last month, as the commission dealt with permitting a mansion construction project in the Indianola area.

There are tribal cultural resource concerns and agreements with tribes appeared to be negotiated. But two tribes still had concerns and wanted additional mitigations.

Planco processing of Gateway Plan proceeds

Kevin L. Hoover
MAD RIVER UNION

ARCATA – The Planning Commission was set to consider one of the Gateway Area Plan’s (GAP) hot-but-ton issues –building height.

The GAP’s proposed 8-story building height standard for the Gateway Area’s Barrel District, plus tall buildings elsewhere in the area, have met fierce resistance by some GAP critics, but gained tentative support in a recent non-binding straw poll of city councilmembers and Planning Commission members.

At its Sept. 13 meeting, the Planco considered design and community benefits proposed in the GAP.

Among the first issues considered was a proposal from a group calling itself Responsible Growth Arcata (RGA), which has proposed formation of an independent body which would consider the GAP apart from the established and currently ongoing processes involving the city’s existing advisory groups, such as the specialized citizen committees and the Planning Commission.

Although Planco Chair Julie Vaisade-Elcock called the RGA proposal a “really great offer,” commissioners weren’t enthused about creating a duplicative Gateway process. Rather, they wanted to retain and continue the currently-underway process, and intensify it, possibly with à la carte components of the RGA proposal.

Commissioner Dan Tangney said that following the recent joint Planco/council study session, his sense of the proposal was that it could be supported by the Planco and council “as long as it was directed,” rather than another complete review of the GAP such as is already in the works via established means.

“If there was a very specific task or number of tasks that were very specific and we felt like an outside group would do well for staff and for us to gather information on that specific list, then I could see it going forward,” Tangney said. Otherwise, he said, “it feels like that group would be basically replicating what I see this group doing and the public engagement that we solicit to come here.”

Commissioner Kimberley White suggested identifying specific issue the new group could consider.

But Vice Chair Scott Davies said

Sue-Meg Point sounds good to Supervisors

Daniel Mintz
MAD RIVER UNION

HUMBOLDT – County supervisors support re-naming an overlook area in Sue-Meg State Park and an effort to change the name of Patrick’s Point Drive is also underway.

Sue-Meg State Park was formerly known as Patrick’s Point State Park and the name change is highly symbolic.

The name Patrick’s Point refers to a rancher who once owned land in the area and is believed to have committed crimes, including murder, against Native Americans. Sue-Meg is the name given to the area by the Yurok people.

Supervisor Steve Madrone’s recommendation to “bring us into the current century” by re-naming the Patrick’s Point overlook area in Sue-Meg State Park got support from the rest of the Board of Supervisors at its Sept. 20 meeting. The re-naming is part of what Madrone described as “a lot of efforts happening recently to try to honor original native names for places.”

During a discussion on it, Madrone said he’s been asked if a re-naming of Patrick’s Point Drive is also afoot. It appears to be.

“In no way do I intend to bring forward a change of that county road without the support of the people who live on that road,” said Madrone.

That support can be more easily gained if funding can be provided to help residents and businesses make changes to stationary and other place-naming items, he continued.

“I’ve put out some feelers and have actually been able to get the money to help minimize that impact to the local residents,” he said.

Madrone said he’ll “go door to door” to ask residents of the road what their opinions are.

The road’s name is now incongruous with the

The course will run Friday afternoons, Oct. 14 to Nov. 18 from 1 to 2:15 p.m. on Zoom.

Topics include your social network and support network, healthcare decision-making and end-of-life choices, aging in place, making a move, your next steps. Students will watch a video and complete assignments between the Zoom class discussion sessions. There is a $25 fee for the class to cover materials and enrollment is limited to 15 students. So we apologize in advance for any glitches, slips, blips, bumbles and outright buffoonery, and regret the errors.

Surrenders to SWAT Team

HUMBOLDT COUNTY SHERIFF’S OFFICE
BAYSIDE – On Sept. 22, 2022, at about 1:41 p.m., an adult female contacted the Humboldt County Sheriff’s Office Emergency Communications Center to report a domestic violence incident that had occurred at a residence on the 2300 block of Plunkett Road in Bayside.
The victim told deputies that she had been assaulted and held against her will by 41-year-old Emiliano Ruiz Carriedo, with whom she was in a dating relationship. The victim was able to escape the residence and contact law enforcement. She was transported to a local hospital with moderate injuries.
Meanwhile, deputies received information that Carriedo was possibly barricaded inside the Plunkett Road residence.
HCSO SWAT and the Humboldt County Crisis Negotiation Team were dispatched to respond. As the teams were being mobilized, Carriedo surrendered to deputies on scene without incident.
Carriedo was booked into the Humboldt County Correctional Facility on charges of kidnapping, false imprisonment, inflicting corporal injury on a spouse and violation of probation.

Following up on the park’s name change, the California State Park and Recreation Commission is asking the U.S. Board of Geographic Names to change the name of Patrick’s Point to Sue-Meg Point.
The federal board is asking for local opinion. Madrone explained that when the park name was changed last year, it was done through a state process.
Changing names of geographic features is done through the separate federal process, hence the timing difference between the two re-namings.
The costs associated with name changes, such as changes to maps and interpretive signs, was discussed during a public comment session.
A caller noted that the name Patrick’s Point Park is “famous nationwide and attracts a lot of tourism” and “tourists who come to visit may not be able to find where they want to get to.”
Madrone suggested that whatever costs ensue, they’ll be worth it.
He related that during the State Park and Recreation Commission hearing on the park name change, some commissioners were concerned that it will set a precedent and trigger a slew of re-namings.
“The chair of the (commission) said, “Yep – it does set a precedent and there might be a lot of different names that end up changing,” said Madrone.
He added, “I agree that the old park name was absolutely well-known but we adapt – we’re really good at that as human beings and we will move forward and take care of all these pieces as we do.”
Supervisors unanimously voted to support the name change to Sue-Meg Point.

Avenue and Virginia Way. A smattering of flyers also appeared in the areas of 12 Street and D Street.
Dokweiler said the investigation is attempting to ascertain whether the hate activity is limited to the flyer pass-out, or if there is more to it. “Incidents like this can be a precursor to more drastic or illegal behaviors,” Dokweiler said. “So far we haven’t seen that.”
The ADL, the leading anti-hate organization which tracks incidents of anti-semitism, identified the group responsible for the flyers as the “Goyim Defense League.” That group’s purpose, says the ADL, “is to seek publicity, harass and spread fear within communities, and project the false image that the network is larger than its actual numbers.”
The GDL, it says, was responsible for at least 74 antisemitic propaganda incidents in 17 states in 2021. Said the ADL, “GDL’s overarching goal is to cast aspersions on Jews and spread antisemitic myths and conspiracy theories. This includes frequent references to Jews having undue power through their ‘control’ of major institutions such as media networks, the economy or the government, or disparaging Jews as degenerates who molest children and advocate for pornography, abortion and LGBTQ+ communities.”

Joy snores adorably, Cherry plays peacefully

Today I’ve got two older girls that are doing wonderfully in foster care. I know that I reference fostering with some frequency but these two show just how great it can be for the dogs to get out of the shelter and into a home.
First up is Joy, who we estimate to be about six. She came to the shelter with an old injury to one leg that hadn’t healed quite right. The shelter was a stressful place for her between the noise and the hard floors and no special person of her own. From the minute she walked in the door of her foster home we could see the tension falling away!
From the first week her foster said: “She really is such a joy to have around!”
She’s smart, affectionate, well-mannered and knows many commands. She figured out the doggie door right away. If someone is looking for a great companion that isn’t high energy, this is the dog. She has happy energy, and even does the occasional zoomies. She LOVES toys, especially squeaky ones. She loves belly rubs. She loves to hang out at your feet when you’re watching tv. She LOVES lying out in the sun. She loves her soft doggie bed. She stays off of the furniture and beds, but I’m sure she would love to join you if she were invited. Warning, she does snore, it’s adorable.”
Since then we have added that she can be a very cute little clown, making everyone laugh when she tosses her toys in the air. She is also a very polite watch dog; she will give a few short barks to let her foster know there is someone outside, but doesn’t bark incessantly. Joy’s old leg injury was once thought to require an amputation but now we see it can be managed well with a relatively small dose of anti-inflammatory. She uses the leg when zooming or holding on to her squeaky toys and seems to be pain-free. Joy also gets along well with her other roommate, an older male dog. Joy is working towards her ideal weight of about 50 pounds. If your perfect dog would make you smile on a gray day, Joy could be the one!

Our other lucky girl is Cherry. She is estimated to be about 11 but you’d never know it! Cherry regularly goes on three- and four-mile hikes with her foster mom. She is happy at the beach or in the woods and sticks close even off the leash.

Cherry appears to have a hearing deficit but she is so attentive to her human that it isn’t an issue. She is quite happy in the company of other dogs and does fine with the family cat. Cherry loves balls and Frisbees and plays a good game of fetch. She has been a very easy dog to have around.
Recently Cherry attended a parking lot adoption event and just sat quietly in the middle with lots of excitement all around. If you’re looking for a low-key companion, this could be your new best friend. Cherry is about 45 pounds.
Both Joy and Cherry are being fostered for the shelter through Redwood Pals Rescue. They are current on vaccines, micro-chipped and spayed.

Gateway | Separate task force considered duplicative

while there are Gateway issues that could benefit from deeper scrutiny, he preferred not to suspend ongoing Planco deliberations and ramp up a separate process.
Instead, he said, smaller working groups could be established to focus on specific issues for inclusion in the coming EIR process. “To me, that feels like a way we can kind of get the best of both worlds,” Davies said.
Commissioner John Barstow agreed. “I don’t see advantage to empaneling another group of people to do the same thing that is already being done,” he said.
Commissioner Judith Mayer didn’t like the part of the initial RGA proposal to “pull back on the process that we’ve already found ourselves in the midst of” that would consider the Gateway plan as something other than an area-specific component of the General Plan.
Commissioner Christian Figueroa said “we shouldn’t pull back on what we’ve already deliberated on so far, we should just continue to proceed.”
White agreed about not retreating from the current process, though she said the task force as more of a parallel process. She said that the RGA could assist by evaluating the use of form-based code in other communities and presenting the information to the Planco. “I’m wanting to push forward,” she said, with assistance from RGA. “I see it as a time saver.”

Vaissade-Elcock said the working group could provide useful information on issues such as home ownership opportunities and sea level rise. Those efforts could be initiated now and provide findings during the upcoming EIR process. She also liked the idea of ranking community benefits.
Tangney said that “parallel paths” are already occurring, and that “they can contribute to this forum that’s already in place.” He said creating and maintaining a separate body to mull the GAP would be an elaborate and burdensome process, and require lots of staff time to maintain. “There’s a lot to that if we actually go down that path,” he said. “To create that group is a big deal.”
White said the 82 signatories to the RGA petition included multiple influential and well-placed individuals with expertise in relevant disciplines, as well as business owners and others. But Davies said that since the task force’s findings would have to be considered by the Planco, that would require suspending the current process to wait for the new group’s findings to mature, which he didn’t want to do.

Community Development Director David Loya asked that the Planco start making some preliminary decisions about key issues, since the GAP was introduced last December. Three additional workshops on form-based code are planned, and if more work is needed, it ought to be initiated now so the results will be ready along with the outcomes of the workshops.
With the current RGA proposal lacking support of commissioners, the task force concept was tabled for future consideration.
Vaissade-Elcock wanted to revisit the GAP’s district designations, breaking the “glaringly wrong” Gateway Corridor section in half. The new northern corridor would be expanded westward to include the Creamery District. She said the lower Corridor could host taller buildings, while the northern portion could host smaller dwellings.
White liked the idea.
Loya suggested that such revisions might be more suitable to a study session, so consideration was suspended for the time being.
Regarding building heights, Davies advocated for 7-story height limits in the Barrel District, 6 stories in the Corridor, 5 stories in the Hub and 4 stories in the Gateway Neighborhood district. He also advocated for ministerial review and public input on individual proposals for the tallest buildings. That, he said, could satisfy both infill density and community will.

Perhaps hearkening back to the “analysis paralysis” that sank The Village student housing project a few years ago, Davies said that “One of the things I don’t want to see is projects that get killed with dozens of trips back to the Planning Commission.”
Fixing heights now, he said, would allow consideration of other issues to proceed, with policies being crafted around the decided height limits.
Mayer proposed a 6 story maximum for the Barrel and Corridor districts, with ministerial review and “substantial” community benefits required for anything over 4 stories.
Figueroa called Davies’ proposal “a good compromise,” though he still favored the draft plan’s higher proposed limits.
City Council candidate Raelina Krikston called in to support the compromise measure, cautioned against “fear-based opinions” and in favor of infill density.
The Planco didn’t make any hard decisions, forwarding the district reconfiguration, building height and community benefit proposals for consideration at this week’s meeting.

Bongio | ‘We’re all trying our best to move forward’

Bongio bitterly criticized the process, suggesting “the Indians” were being sneaky and obstructive. He repeatedly used the term as he complained about how the rules on protecting tribal cultural resources were being applied.
His angry commentary has offended tribes and the community, and the Wiyot Tribal Council and administration has filed a formal complaint about it with the county.
At the Sept. 20 supervisors meeting, Supervisor Steve Madrone sponsored a discussion on actions to address the situation.
“None of this stuff is easy,” he said, referring to addressing prejudicial attitudes. “Culturally we may have been brought up a certain way but you know, it’s a new world here and we’re all trying our best to move forward.”
Madrone suggested a variety of options, including a censure of Bongio and asking the supervisor who appointed him to remove him from the commission.

First District Supervisor Rex Bohn appointed Bongio about a decade ago. “It was bad – and I told Alan I was disappointed,” he said about Bongio’s comments, adding, “I will still support my friend and I will still be appalled at the reprehensible statements he made.”
But Bohn also credited Bongio with otherwise doing good work as a planning commissioner. He isn’t willing to remove him from the commission.
“We need to address what happened years ago and we need to address what’s happening now,” he said. “But I don’t know if the way we do it is just, ‘If you offended us, we cancel you’ – I just can’t bring myself to it.”
Bohn concluded by saying, “If the board asks me to ask him to resign, I’m sorry, I can’t do it, I just think he has to too much to offer.”
The board’s big picture discussion included comments from Commissioner Mike Wilson, who said the situation is part of larger social dynamics.

He described Bongio’s comments as “a lot of bias coming out into the open that the commissioner has been carrying, it’s not like it showed up that one day.”
Wilson said he’s expecting Bongio – and the community – to “work on those things, and challenge ourselves and appreciate the challenge to do that hard work.”
Bohn made a motion to censure Bongio, direct him to step down as Planning Commission chair and go through the county’s Diversity, Equity and Inclusion training.
There was uncertainty about whether the board has the authority to direct Bongio to step down as commission chair. But Bohn said he would ask Bongio to resign if he doesn’t agree to it.
Bohn’s motion got unanimous approval.

Eighth Street one-way demo pop-up event

CITY OF ARCATA
ARCATA – The City of Arcata Engineering Department, in collaboration with CSW/Stuber-Stroeh Engineering consultants is preparing a one-way traffic demo, pop-up event on Eighth Street between K and J streets from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 1.

Arcata has commenced a formal planning effort for the Eighth and Ninth Street Improvement Project. Consistent with the 2020 Plaza Improvement Task Force recommendations, the project proposes to convert Eighth and Ninth streets into one-way operations similar to the adjacent street operations near the Plaza.

The proposed project will result in one-way travel on Ninth Street, in the westbound direction, from F to K Street and Eighth Street will run in the eastbound direction from K to F Street. By removing one travel lane on Eighth and Ninth streets between K and I streets, a width of about 12 feet is freed for other uses in the public right-of-way.

The pop-up event will feature a demonstration of a complete streets design alternative for the proposed one-way streetscape on Eighth Street between K and J streets. Complete streets provide a balance of facilities for all modes of transportation; vehicular, bicycle and pedestrian. Please come check it out and provide feedback on the design via a public survey.

On the day of the pop-up event, the one-block section of Eighth Street will only be open to eastbound vehicle travel, members of the community are encouraged to follow all safety directions and traffic control devices within the project area. The department understands that lane closures can be stressful, but appreciates the community's participation in this demonstration.

For more information regarding the project and to take the public survey, visit the project webpage at cityofarcata.org/980/8th-and-9th-Street-Improvement or contact Jessica Jewett at (707) 825-2176, or by email at jjewett@cityofarcata.org.

Plaza rally focuses on climate justice, mental health

HUMBOLDT 350
ARCATA – Humboldt 350 organized a youth climate march on ancestral Wiyot lands at Arcata Plaza on the evening of Friday, Sept. 23. The group chose this date to coordinate with global climate strikes spearheaded across the world by Fridays for Future, the youth climate organization started by Greta Thunberg, who sparked a global youth movement in 2018.

The event included speeches by students from Cal Poly Humboldt and North Coast Preparatory Academy, 350 Humboldt and an Indigenous community member, as well as a brass band and a march around the Plaza with live music and chanting. Approximately 100 students and community members were in attendance.

Speeches and messaging focused on the inequity of climate change, which disproportionately impacts Black, Indigenous, and all people of color, as well as the poor and global south.

"Justice must be at the center of every conversation of climate change. Those that are contributing the least to climate change are suffering the worst impacts due to the emissions from wealthy countries. As if colonization, genocide, and slavery have not been enough, now this?" says Jamie Blatter of 350 Humboldt when reflecting on the inequities of climate change and the recent climate disasters in Puerto Rico and Pakistan.

Rico and Pakistan.

"Because these changes are happening in Africa and the Global South first, we are once again ignoring black and brown suffering" says speaker Jules Tatum of Cal Poly Humboldt.

On this note, community member Mary Kate Lowry brought attention to Indigenous stewardship of land and water resources for over 14,000 years, highlighting the need to return to Indigenous wisdom.

The event amplified youth voices, who are inheriting the impacts of climate change caused by previous and current generations.

"The last time rain fell in Madagascar I was 13 years old, in the eighth grade. And now I stand before you, 18 years old, a freshman in college, begging you to open your eyes and see what has become of our planet. Begging you to take action before my life is cut in half. Begging you to let my generation live out a full life, begging you to give me the option of having kids before their lifetime is stolen from them too" said speaker Jules Tatum of Cal Poly Humboldt

"At times like these, it's easy to feel a sense of hopelessness or lack of control of the situation. Sometimes to us, it seems like the older generation is out of touch and don't care because they won't be around to experience the aftermath. And it makes us less willing to do what we can, when the people that have the resources don't even seem to care. But try Reaching out to environmental conservation groups like Humboldt 350 and EPIC to see how you can help, because there's always something that can be done," said speakers Flora Harper and Moana Mao, seniors at North Coast Preparatory Academy

Speakers also discussed the mental health impacts of climate change, encouraging community members to reach out to one another, acknowledge their grief and fear, and hold onto hope.

"If you feel anxiety, depression, and grief in response to the rapidly escalating climate crisis, you are not alone. You lean on me and I will lean on you, and we will do this together" said speaker Jamie Blatter of 350 Humboldt

Trinidad Planning Commission reviewing General Plan

The Trinidad Planning Commission, with all five members, Chairman Richard Johnson, and Commissioners Diane Stockness, Aaron Hakenen, Tom Hopkins and Tristan Cole present along with City Planner Trever Parker, met via Zoom last week.

The Commission is slowly and steadily reviewing the Trinidad General Plan, last updated in 2006.

The Noise Element was discussed at length and two other elements, the Cultural and Historical Element and the Safety Element, need to be reviewed at future meetings.

Trever Parker, always meticulously prepared, presented a lengthy draft of the Noise Element, with questions from the Commissioners on traffic, construction, special events and other matters.

After that, 16 colorful, detailed maps were discussed, including the City of Trinidad Land Use and Zoning Map, Jurisdiction of City Limits, Land Use Designations, Government Land Ownership, Planning Area, Land Use Outside the City Limits, Watersheds, Special Status Plant Species, Special Status Terrestrial Animal Species, Special Status Aquatic and Pelagic Marine Species, Geological Conditions and Constraints, Soil Classification and Limitations, Trails, Road Classification, Stormwater System, and Alternative Transportation, all prepared and updated by SHN Consulting Engineers.

The Trinidad General Plan affects the lives of every individual, both in the City limits and outside the City limits, particularly with regard to water use and the possibility of annexation of some areas. Go to the City of Trinidad website to study documents discussed at meetings, or email the Trinidad city clerk at cityclerk@trinidad.ca.gov to be placed on an email list announcing city meetings.

Some days I worry...

I'm having more and more days where I wake up and I'm not sure what time or day it is. It takes a while worrying if I should be worried. Today I woke up and the clock read 8:30; the cat was still sleeping, and the sun wasn't up. Then I tried to recollect the afternoon and evening... something I used to do when I was in my mid-twenties and learning, unsuccessfully, to drink. Turns out it was 8:30 p.m.

MCKINLEYVILLE SENIOR LIVING

Yesterday, my worry was that my favorite electrician would not show up to make sense of the spaghetti wiring that has been lurking behind every piece of furniture since I bought this house 22 years ago. It's a small house, in a beautiful spot, on an acre with nice neighbors. It was once owned by a stoned surfer, and I have been fixing, remodeling and painting since I moved to McKinleyville. I even found the remains of the brick fireplace he tore out.

But back to spaghetti central... my old oak file cabinet with brass handles from the forties, rescued from a salvage sale at a naval shipyard, stripped of its basic military gray, fits between two floor to ceiling bookcases that fill the entire wall. Books, photos, odd collections of stuff, a sound system and junk have been here since the beginning. They have covered an electrical nightmare of power strips, hooked to each other, cables, phone wires, extension cords, cat hair and dead bugs.

When I moved the file cabinet, cleverly put on sliders, the nightmare began to appear and suddenly my bed, dresser and every flat space in the room began to fill with books and 20-year-old magazines, boxes of unidentified stuff and the unseen bottom shelf of the bookcase was covered with more dead bugs, webs and spiders.

I realized that the reason the old Electrolux vacuum cleaner standing in the living room was waiting for me, not just lurking to annoy me as my oldest cat passed, but to actually be of service. Then I found the mop. I've always wanted to be a better housekeeper but obviously as I creep into old age, this is an unrealistic dream.

But when I found an ancient, dog-eared copy of Robert Heinlein's Stranger in a Strange Land, I went back to bed with the cat and started to read it again after only 64 years. Grok!

Stop the bureaucratic sleepwalking – sea level rise will doom our plans Ma Nature has clearly warned us to relocate the Wastewater Treatment Plant

UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres referred to August’s flooding in Pakistan as “a climate catastrophe,” urging nations to “stop sleepwalking” into the destruction of the planet due to rising temperatures. The Secretary General warns us that, “Today, it’s Pakistan. Tomorrow, it could be your country.”

“[Antarctica’s “Doomsday” Thwaites Glacier] is really holding on today by its fingernails, and we should expect to see big changes over small timescales in the future – even from one year to the next – once the glacier retreats beyond a shallow ridge in its bed.”

British Marine Geophysicist Robert Larter on September 7, 2022 SciTechDaily article.

“The best time to plant a tree was 20 years ago. The second-best time is now.”

– Popular Chinese proverb.

When your water system fails, you can always truck water in. When your sewer system fails, you are in deep doodoo, because you cannot truck sewage out.

– Obscure Italian proverb.

REARRANGING THE DECK CHAIRS ON THE TITANIC

Each new United Nations’ climate change report from the world’s best climate scientists is more and more strident about the dire situation concerning extreme weather events. They no longer just say “extreme weather”; instead, they use the term CATASTROPHIC in describing weather events like what happened in Pakistan last month and Puerto Rico now. Furthermore, Antarctica’s “Doomsday” Thwaites Glacier is on the verge of radically altering older models for both amounts and speed of expected sea level rise.

news/doomsday-glacier-is-melting-faster-than-thought-study-finds-223130542.html

And here Arcata sits with its most critical and most vulnerable infrastructure: the Arcata Marsh sewage treatment system. It is doubly threatened by inundation from sea level rise on one front and superstorm deluges on the other. But people with their heads in the Arcata Bay mud would say that it is highly unlikely to happen here because rising sea level won’t affect us until 30 years from now.

However, it will not take a 3-foot rise in sea level 30 years

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

from now to wreak havoc with the Arcata Marsh levees and treatment system. It won’t even take any sea level rise to do this; in fact, it already happened 17 years ago! Just look back to the 2005 New Year’s Eve Storm and you will find that Arcata’s sewage treatment pond levees suffered $1.5 million damage.

cnrfc.noaa.gov/storm_summaries/dec2005storms.php

Wake up and look! The Arcata Marsh sewage treatment system is within the Pacific tidal zone right now! The only thing that keeps the Marsh and Arcata Bay separate are its levees. Furthermore, with our normal December-January king tide events, these dikes are just inches from being overtopped by brackish Bay waters.

Add increasingly common catastrophic weather events with high winds and a “bomb cyclone” of monsoon rains, and even reinforced levees will be unable to hold back nature’s fury. Arcata will be SOL! In August, this happened in Pakistan, then Puerto Rico today, and tomorrow (this winter) this could happen in Arcata!

Conversely, you might say that since Arcata’s sewer system upgrade application to the California Coastal Commission was approved on Sept. 8 with a 30-year permit, then the reinforced levees will prevent overtopping and give us many more years of service. However, having higher levees is a double-edged sword: just drive the 101 corridor during a King Tide event in December after a storm has dropped a few inches of rainfall and you will see an almost continuous lake between Arcata and Eureka behind the Highway 101 levee system for days at a time. The same is true between Arcata and Mad River Slough along Highway 255.

While the levees hold back the Bay waters with little wave-damage during high tides, the storm runoff collects behind them. It is at low tide when the floodgates have been overwhelmed as outflowing stormwater overtops weak points of the levees, causing blowouts. You still can see the results from 2005 right now on the railroad bed levee just north of the KOA exit where the stormwater behind it flowed out over the levee and completely washed out a 20-foot section. The same thing happened at the Mad River Slough (since repaired), when outgoing stormwater washed out a large section of the levee and subsequent flooding of brackish Bay water ruined the fields behind the levee.

And that is what would happen behind the Arcata Marsh’s reinforced levees in similar circumstances: the system would become overwhelmed by stormwater, flowing out over the levees with partially-treated sewage, eroding the levees and contaminating Arcata Bay. Only one of the ever-more frequent mega-storms like in Pakistan would do damage to the Arcata Marsh without regard to sea level rise.

In the Sept. 8 Coastal Commission report, it states that Arcata has long struggled with meeting the Regional Water Quality Board’s discharge standards when stormwater inundation causes partially-treated wastewater to flow into the Bay. Thus, either continued levee damage or contamination issues will lead to the system’s closure, and Arcata’s reinforcement strategies will abruptly have to change to retreat strategies.

If you were hoping that Mother Nature would give Arcata a polite 20-year warning as to when we should begin planning for a new sewage system located out of harm’s way, you would be correct, because She already did this on Dec. 31, 2005! The warnings She is giving now are mega-droughts and mega-fires and mega-storms.

In the Coastal Commission’s approval of Arcata’s upgrade plans, it mandated that the City develop a Coastal Hazards Adaptation and Implementation Plan (CHAIP) in the next 5 years. The CHAIP must include relocation plans for a new sewage treatment system, which supposedly would allay concerns about sea level rise inundating the Arcata Marsh from its bay side.

However, earlier this year, the “Doomsday” Thwaites Glacier in Antarctica was predicted to break loose into the ocean causing massive sea level rise beginning as early as 2027. The latest report states this is likely to happen even sooner!

The problems with the Coastal Commission in citing NOAA’s latest sea level rise 2022 prediction data as a reference for Arcata in developing their CHAIP is that NOAA states that all the data is derived from a 2020 baseline. Furthermore, Arcata’s Local Coastal Program update is based on similar outdated information. Unfortunately, 2020 data might as well be 1999 data in this time of a rapidly changing situation with the Thwaites Glacier.

Then consider the bureaucratic processes to replace the system: The plans for only upgrading Arcata’s sewage treatment system began in 2015 and construction is scheduled for completion in 2024. Therefore, if the City of Arcata completes the CHAIP by 2027 and actually finds an appropriate relocation site for its new sewage treatment system, then funding, designing, permitting, and Simply review Arcata’s Sea Level Rise Vulnerability Assessment page 46 for just 1.6-foot predicted rise and you will find that the only sizable acreage not inundated in southern Arcata is the lower section of the Gateway Area.

digitalcommons.humboldt.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1033&context=hsuslri_local

Thus, the most important task for the Arcata Planning Commission and City Council for Arcata’s long-term future is designating the best site for relocating a new sewage treatment system for the time when sea level rise forces us to retreat from the Arcata Marsh!

Without determining if any of the Gateway Area is best suited for sewer system relocation needs, and continuing forward with the Gateway Plan would be like rearranging the deck chairs on the Titanic. Choosing 4-, 6- or 8-storied-buildings, one-way streets, parking spaces per dwelling unit, the best green construction standards, alternative modes of transportation (even canals with gondolas) is counterproductive when climate change is forcing Arcata to relocate its sewage treatment system, sooner rather than later. Adding 4,000 or 6,000 or 8,000 new residents in the project in the next 10 or 15 or 20 years will only mean much bigger problems for future generations.

Otherwise, all City of Arcata plans and all Cal Poly Humboldt’s plans and all Arcatans’ plans go down the toilet if we have not expeditiously developed a comprehensive plan for Arcata’s next sewage treatment system.

Councilmembers, Planning Commissioners and City staff: Stop sleepwalking! Get your heads out of a past – once slow-moving and relatively predictable – which no longer exists!

We now live in a time of catastrophic weather events with rapidly increasing perils. Instead of adding to the challenges which the next generation of Arcatans will face, make it easier for them by shelving this Gateway Plan, and starting the CHAIP planning (planting) process today, and finishing it quickly. There is nothing more important for Arcata’s extended future than a secure sewage system!

Putting the Earth on top is legal, defensible and simply sensible

Last week’s fanciful flagpole photo bedecked with 19 flags, many of them of galactic scale, made me laugh. It also made me wonder where the sub-atomic and quantum particle flags were, beneath the CalPoly banner! It is certainly good to remind ourselves of our infinitesimal spot in the universe.

Measure M, on the Arcata ballot in November, addresses much more finite issues. When Arcata voters decide to fly the Earth flag at the top of City flagpoles, above the U.S. and California flags, they will make a strong symbolic statement of our priorities. Accelerating climate change threatens all life on Earth. We need to make the health of the Earth our first priority and take meaningful action to slow and reverse global warming. We can only have a healthy nation if we have a healthy Earth. Let’s remind ourselves of this focus. Fly the Earth flag on top.

Last Friday, people rallied on the Plaza in solidarity with Fridays for the Future, the international organization formed by Greta Thunberg. The rally was organized by our local 350 Humboldt and asserted our commitment join with others worldwide to support policies that aggressively address climate change. As we marched around the Plaza, people were waving Earth flags as a symbol of our planet, which is in dire need of our focused attention.

PUT THE EARTH ON TOP

Flags are symbols, and putting the Earth flag at the top of city flagpoles is a symbol to express our priorities. It in no way disrespects the United States. We can still proudly fly the Stars and Stripes, and flying the Earth flag on top expresses our intention to prioritize a healthy Earth above nationalism. Today, instead of embracing diplomacy and peace, an extreme excess of nationalism advances policies that lead to armed confrontation, and feed the polluting military/industrial complex. Conventional conflicts are prolonged and escalated and the horror of nuclear war becomes more likely.

Our local Chapter 56 of Veterans for Peace has endorsed this measure.

It is also just logical to put the Earth on top. After all, the Earth includes the United States, which includes California.

We could continue to go upward and outward through space in our symbolism, as last week’s funny photo portrayed, but our ability to improve the health of the Earth ends at the top of our atmosphere. It is our home, and we do have the power to treat it with less greed, and more care and respect.

People often ask, “Isn’t it illegal?” While the Flag Code states that the U.S. flag should fly above other flags, according to the Congressional Research Service, the code is merely advisory and has no enforcement measures or penalties.

If there is any legal challenge to this measure, the City Council has the choice to defend the measure or not, and the sponsors pledge to provide pro-bono legal representation for the City. We are also providing the actual flags to be displayed.

As citizens of Arcata, let’s speak out to prioritize a healthy and peaceful Earth. Vote Yes on Measure “M.” Put the Earth on Top! Questions? Comments? Want to help? Contact puttheearthontop@gmail.com.

Kimberley’s the right choice for council

Kimberley White is one of my all-time Sheroes, which is to say that she belongs in the pantheon of women I greatly admire. Kimberley, who currently serves on the Planning Commission, is running for a seat on the Arcata City Council. She is a co-coordinator of CUNA (Comunidad Unida del Norte de Arcata), and has worked tirelessly to empower the Latinx community, students, low-income folks and ALL Arcatans.

CUNA has done a remarkable job of transforming the Valley West neighborhood into a place where community members can thrive and prosper. They’ve planted fruit trees in Hallen Park, started a Tianguis (Latinx-style flea market), created teen meetups, dance and theater classes, painted a basketball court mural on Hallen Drive along with picnic amenities, and many other projects involving Cal Poly Humboldt students and community members. Kimberley has been a leader in this effort, and has always stood up for the most vulnerable members of our community.

For those of you who feel that your voices haven’t been heard, Kimberley White repe-sents an alternative. As a woman of color, she has used her commitment to participatory democracy to engage, empower and amplify the voices of people left out in our community. In short, no one has worked more tirelessly to give everyone and every neighborhood a voice in affairs that affect our community.

I was pleased to see that several members of the Arcata City Council turned out to support Kimberley at the kickoff to her campaign, including the mayor and vice-mayor. Kimberley has the endorsement of the Humboldt County Progressive Democrats and other progressive organizations. She was the runner up in the last election.

Please consider that Valley West and North Arcata has never had a representative in its entire history. That said, Kimberley cares about ALL Arcatans and our collective future.

Isn’t it about time that VW and North Arcata had representation, especially from such an active and gifted person? There’s little doubt that the rewards from her participation on the council will benefit ALL of us in the long run.

It’s past time that Arcata “walks the walk” about “equity,” rather than just giving it lip service. Please consider electing Kimberley White to the Arcata City Council. Thank you.

Colin’s letter, DUI apology and the GAP

Based off the trend of unfounded and hateful comments about me recently, it appears as though the vocal minority advocating for unsustainable growth and 8 story buildings in Arcata, is really worried about me getting re-elected. I’m referring to the Gateway Area Plan (GAP) which was originally approved with good intentions by the City Council but has now morphed into an unorganized bottomless pit of taxpayer resources.

As Colin Fiske acknowledges in his September 14th letter to the editor, I do have many supporters, and that support is growing. Why? The answer is simple: I’m listening to you. I’m listening to you, the People, who make Arcata the amazing place that it is. And I’m the only voice representing your beliefs right now.

You’ve made it clear to me that you DON’T want irresponsible overdevelopment of your beautiful small town. You DO want to preserve your neighborhoods and your quality of life. You probably moved to Arcata for a good reason. Usually, people tell me it was to get away from the boondoggles people like Colin Fiske have advocated for, resulting in cities that have been ruined by unbridled overdevelopment. “It used to be such a great place to live. Then the university/developers/monied interests took over and now no one can afford to live there. There’s a whole new set of problems and crime has increased.” This isn’t my opinion. This is what I’ve heard countless times over my 5 years of representing you and listening to you. This is also supported by hard data.

❖ LETTERS

Back to Fiske’s LOE. What concerned me the most about his letter was the blatant libel. He quotes me as saying:

“I guess its [sic] sad my car crash didn’t phase [sic] me. At this point I’m used to almost dying and walking away from it and I don’t know if thats [sic] a good thing. Its [sic] happened so many times that it feels routine...”

Then he says:

“Read that again. Watson is admitting to habitually driving so recklessly that totaling his car was a “routine.””

Admitted to habitually driving recklessly? I don’t see that anywhere. Probably because it’s not true. The accident I was referring to was in Pismo Beach while I was on city business researching wastewater treatment facilities, (because for those of you who aren’t familiar with it, operating our current treatment plant in an area on the bay that’s certain to be affected by sea level rise is the biggest challenge our city is facing right now). The purpose of my trip can be proven by communications between me and the city manager who helped me plan the trip. The date was July 21st, 2020. I remember it clearly because it was two days before my father committed suicide. When I wrote that text it was days later, and I was deeply distraught over losing my father and my best friend. I was merely reflecting on how blessed I still was despite such a great loss.

The circumstances of that accident were that I was driving to meet a developer I met at my hotel the night before to discuss building affordable housing in Arcata. This can also be confirmed by my conversations with the city manager. I was merging onto the 101 freeway when a car pulled out in front of me and forced me to swerve to miss it. My car hit a curb and flipped multiple times down into a gully. By an act of God, chance, or however you want to explain it, my car landed on its wheels and I was completely uninjured. When I was climbing out of the gully, I noticed miscellaneous car parts everywhere around me. This was all documented by the CHP, and the officer who arrived told me it happened all the time there. He said they always pull wrecked cars out of that gully. You’d think someone would address that, but that’s another issue. The other accidents I referred to were over the course of my 25 years of driving, had nothing to do with alcohol or drugs, nor were they found to be my fault.

Colin also says, “...after the crash...”, when he refers to my August 2021 DUI, as if I had crashed into something that night. There was no crash. He says he’s referencing the actual incident report from the CHP so he must clearly understand this and is deliberately trying to manipulate the narrative. What actually happened was that I slowed down and stopped my car at the direction of the CHP. Thankfully, no one was injured and I’m very grateful for that.

I’ve apologized profusely to my fellow community members. I’m sorry some people need to see a headline to perceive that. The district attorney was quoted as saying I took responsibility. The editor of this paper, Kevin Hoover, wrote an OP ED supporting me. (Now, though, he’s out to get me and writes completely false narratives of my behavior during council meetings. Just watch the meetings yourself and compare to his accounting). I did community service, paid thousands in fines, I attend my required classes weekly, I receive weekly therapy voluntarily, and I completed a 30-day rehabilitation program which I was not required to do. I made this decision on my own and its one of the best choices I’ve made in my entire life. As of last week, I’m 11 months sober and I’m really proud of that.

Please let me take this opportunity to apologize, again, though. I’m so sorry to all of you for letting you down last year. Representing you is the best part of my life and I jeopardized it, as well as the safety of others, with my incredibly poor decisions. Representing you is so important to me and that’s why I’ve done everything possible to make the changes I needed to make in my life. I’ve gone through a lot the last couple of years, and while it’s been tough to deal with at times, its also made me stronger than I’ve ever been. I’m more motivated now than ever to fight for you and for what we all believe in.

These people who are advocating for 8 story buildings dominating our small town have basically decided that they don’t believe in the democratic process. They see themselves as the patriarchy, and you, the People, as their naive children. They know what’s best for you and they have a plan on how they’re going to force their will onto you, regardless of a strong majority of you feeling differently. For example, a recent survey of Arcata voters showed about 70% of you want to keep the current building height limit at a reasonable four stories. But they don’t care. They’re going to try and mislead you and bully their views onto you, no matter what.

What I found interesting after seeing the responses from this survey, was that Colin Fiske voted not once, not twice, but THREE times for 8 story buildings in Arcata. Not only did he show complete disregard for what the Arcata community believes in, he deliberately tried to manipulate an honest polling of voters.

If we don’t pay attention to what’s going on, attend council meetings, and get involved in the GAP process, they’re going to keep trying to slip their pro-development agenda by you. They’ll use every trick in the book. It’s already happening. The public is being given false and misleading information about the Gateway Area Plan, and the people who want to ruin Arcata are attacking everyone that disagrees with them. They’re attacking me, they’re calling you NIMBYs, and they’re creating false narratives to manipulate your opinions.

The time is NOW to get involved with the GAP. I know this is a community of hard working and compassionate people who DO support building more housing. We CAN build more housing in a responsible way. In a way that will offer more home ownership opportunities for present and future Arcatans, while preserving the character of our Community.

I will fight for you with everything I’ve got, but I can’t do it alone. We need to come together as a Community and let our voices be heard together.

Thank you for the great privilege of representing you these last 5 years, and please don’t hesitate to contact me if you need help with anything, or if you’d like to learn more about how to get involved with the GAP.

Sincerely,

The Great Reset looms

My name is Dana Quillman and I am running for Arcata City Council. Please visit danaquillman.com for information everyone should be exposed to that is hard to access because of the new norm of censorship.

My platform is simple. No “New World Order”, including the urbanization that is happening all over the world including here in Arcata with the Gateway project. I think the Gateway project is too big to be decided upon by a planning commission and a city council. This small of group of people should not have the power to make such huge changes which will drastically negatively affect Arcata. Bring the Arcata Gateway project to a vote of the people! An even easier solution to save Arcata is for the university to be a true and respectful community partner and lower the amount of enrollment so as not to overpower this jewel of a city.

Why would a small city with such a small footprint because of immovable borders of forested hills, a river, a bay and agricultural land in a 100-year flood plain and an ocean, be chosen to place a CalPoly university? There has never been a true university-city “partnership” in Arcata and now there is going to be much less of one than there ever was. Arcata is just ripe for the picking by a powerful entity that is obviously willing to steamroll over Arcata, while trying to convince us it wants to be a part of our community.

Let’s face it, Humboldt CalPoly is a powerful institution run by the “State” that will have increased dominance over Arcata to the point where eventually the only people that will be able to afford to live in Arcata are people with a lot of money and subsidized students. Is that what we want for Arcata? I think HSU/CalPoly has plans to eventually BE the community. The unvaccinated public are not allowed to step foot on the “State” run premises of the university. It subjects its unvaccinated students to the coercion of endless weekly questionable testing, and I have no doubt face-masking could be back at the drop of a hat. Maybe when the university has full control of Arcata, the same will be required of all citizens in order to live here.

The Gateway project, which is obviously being driven by the university, falls right in line with the Great Reset agenda of “smart cities”. The new world order plans are to ban small independent farms, get people out of rural areas and corral them into urban areas where the population will be much easier to control. Urbanization is the name of the game. No more talk about quality of life.

Put everyone in a small compartment to live in with no room to have a yard to grow flowers or vegetables, or play in. Homeownership will be a thing of the past. Build 8 story buildings and cram as many human bodies into the smallest space possible. We won’t need parking because people won’t need cars! They don’t want you to have any independence to take a long drive, take a road trip, or possibly make an escape. And what about the “silver tsunami” that is coming, the baby boomer generation that will even outnumber the university students, how will they get around or park their cars? They don’t count. What about the people that need to commute to work? Well, so many jobs will be replaced with artificial intelligence. Between most of the population working from home and robots doing all the rest of the jobs, everyone can just stay home in their cubicle, eat Bill Gates’ synthetic meat or bugs, and get a check from the government which will be doable since people will have so few needs. No one will own anything (except for the Great Reset planners of course), and we will all be really happy! Everything will work perfectly and the planet will be saved, especially because everyone will be forced to get their injections for Covid-19, the regular annual flu that mysteriously disappeared for the last 2 years, and whatever new fandangled illness the mad scientists come up with next, or some old one that they have revived.

By the way China has “smart” eco-system skyscrapers to house their population with all the amenities built right into the same building, so that when the government decides it’s time for another lockdown, they can simply lock the doors, no muss, no fuss. Please, do some research on smart cities and see if they are something you want to live in.

With the implementation of the very dangerous 5G technology (which will not speed up the internet), the people that want to control all of us will have so many more ways to do so. 5G or whatever future “G” they create is going to threaten the health of all living things according to many scientists and experts, who are of course censored, vilified and labeled as conspiracy theorists, just like the doctors and scientists that speak against the Covid-19 agenda. The very same planners who want a Great Reset also think there are too many people on the planet so maybe 5G is a perfect solution in their mind, sort of like “kill two birds (or many more) with one stone”?

Science = ignorance?

Wow. I can’t believe you printed this letter by conspiracy theorist Dana Quillman Union, Sept. 21). Two sentences struck me as psychotically driven: “...I knew that it [movie Plandemic] was being kept from the public for nefarious reasons.” and “... a fact [emphasis mine – not a fact] that there is no such thing as ‘the’ science and anyone in the know who parrots the phrase ‘I trust the science’ must want to keep people ignorant.” Huh? Does not compute.

Here is what we know about the anti-vaccinator she adheres to:

“Plandemic... [movie and video] promote misinformation about the COVID-19 pandemic. They feature Judy Mikovits, a discredited American researcher... while Willis’s abhorrent filmmaking style has been cited as lending to their conspiratorial and brainwashing nature.” — Wikipedia

Seems to me, if people like Dana ever saw the truth, they still could not deal with their guilt as the ones who caused millions of unnecessary deaths and prolonged a pandemic ruining billions of people’s lives. They would go crazy, if they aren’t already.

Madsummer musical opens at Redwood Curtain Theatre

LONGSHADR PRODUCTIONS
EUREKA – Madsummer is a very free, jukebox musical adaptation of A Midsummer Night's Dream, with all of the lovers over the age of 60, set in a care home during a pandemic with the underpaid staff of the home like Cirque on steroids. It is a raucous theatrical event about love and aging in the time of COVID.
Madsummer opens on Wednesday, Oct 5 at 8 p.m. at Redwood Curtain Theatre, 220 First St. in Old Town Eureka with a pay-what-you-can open dress rehearsal. All proceeds from this performance will benefit Redwood Curtain. There are no reservations for this performance. It is first come, first served.

tion without an intermission
Madsummer is a play with music. There will be a live band and songs, but also rich characters engaged with the human appetites ala' the commedia dell'arte – "food, money, sex and justice."
It is a human comedy with the dark as well as the light. Carlo Mazzone Clementi, one of the founders of Dell'Arte, once said that "life is 51 percent comedy and 49 percent tragedy and it is the two pushing against each other that creates the human comedy." That will be Madsummer.
It should be noted that, according to the Population Reference Bureau, the aging baby boom generation will fuel a 75 percent increase in older Americans requiring nursing home care to about 2.3 million people in 2030. And thematically, it should be stated that love, ...deep, passionate love... is possible and doesn't end as one ages.

Madsummer is directed by Michael Fields, founding producing director of Dell'Arte. It is designed by Lynnie Horrigan with lighting design by Michael Foster. The band includes Marla Joy, Jeff Kelley, Tim Randles, Mike Labolle and Rob Diggins.
The acting company includes Zera Starchild, Donald Forrest, Jeff Thomas, Wilda Thompson, Jesse March, Kathryn Cesarz, Susan Abbey, Ben Clifton, Bob Wells, Scott Malcolm and Peggy Metzger (former artistic director of Redwood Curtain Theatre in Eureka).

DELAYED LAUNCH Lelia Moskowitz, left, author of Growland, and Kathy Wollenberg, author of Far Less, will have their first book launch event on Saturday, Oct. 1 at 4 p.m. at Septentrio Winery.

Book launch for local authors

THE PRESS AT CAL POLY HUMBOLDT

ARCATA – Lelia Moskowitz, author of Growland, and Kathy Wollenberg, author of Far Less, will have their first book launch event at Septentrio Winery, 650 Sixth St, Arcata, on Saturday, Oct. 1 starting at 4 p.m. The authors will read from Growland and Far Less, answer questions, and sign books.
While both novels were published in 2020, the pandemic postponed any recognition of the release and, ironically, made the focus of each novel even more relevant today.
Moskowitz' Growland is a historical testament to the illicit marijuana-growing culture of Southern Humboldt while Wollenberg's Far Less is a coming-of-age story about a homeless teen living in Arcata's Community Forest. Far Less is the recipient of two Silver Nautilus Awards, a Gold Forward Indies Award, and most recently, a Bronze and Gold CIPPA EVVY Award.

PLAYHOUSE ARTS PRESENTS

'Migrations: Walking Together'

ARCATA PLAYHOUSE
ARCATA – Playhouse Arts presents Migrations: Walking Together on Saturday, Oct. 1 from 9 a.m. to approximately 2 p.m.

The structure of this event is a procession: we will start in front of the Arcata Playhouse at 1251 Ninth St. in Arcata and finish with a celebratory parade at Valley West in Carlson Park at 5201 Carlson Park Dr. in Arcata.
The procession will go from the Arcata Playhouse to Tenth Street to G Street and then cross U.S. Highway 101 on the pedestrians overpass to L.K. Wood Boulevard. From there it will go from Sunset Avenue to Jay Street, Baldwin and Maple to Spear Avenue to Felix Avenue to Potowat. From Potowat the procession will travel on Weeot Way to Janes Road to Guintoli and ends at Carlson Park.

The procession stops at several locations along the route where diverse cultural groups and organizations such as Humboldt Asians & Pacific Islanders in Solidarity (HAPI), Centro Del Pueblo, the Yurok Wellness Coalition, Outer Space, and the Northcoast Environmental Center will share their work, play, and culture. Participants can plan to walk the whole route or just drop in for a performance or two hosted by these local organizations.
Migrations utilizes the research and community outreach that Playhouse Arts continues to develop to broaden and deepen our relationships as humans. The arts help us experience the connective tissue that binds us to this part of the Earth today. The Playhouse and their partners will look at who we are through the lens of migration in Humboldt to see the systemic inequities and history that have driven us to this point – to realize, to empathize, and to be compelled to undertake just action.
This original, multi-disciplinary, multicultural project offers dance, movement, storytelling, puppetry, music, poetry and more. We will celebrate with food upon arriving at our final destination, Carlson Park. Join us for the whole walk (about five miles) or drop in for specific performances and cultural sharings! Strollers and bikes are welcome, please no motor vehicles.
